How will our SIP Trunking benefit your Business ?

The business migration to SIP

More and more companies are considering a switch to SIP Trunking. With combined cost savings alongside greater flexibility it is enabling businesses to do more for less.

How will you benefit?

Make the most of your existing network investment. Using a data network for all your calls saves on the rental costs of running a separate traditional voice network. You'll also have just one network which means it's simpler for your IT team to manage.

Reassurance that calls won't be missed

The quality of service ensures your calls are given priority over other data. Even if the rest of your bandwidth is being used, your voice calls will always be prioritised.

Keep people connected

Our SIP Trunks have a variety of business continuity options to keep your business running in the event of fault. For example, you can redirect individual extension numbers to other numbers of your choice. This offers a more robust resilience than on a traditional voice network.

With voice calls running over your data connection if a fault is detected you can automatically run over any back-up that you have in place for disaster recovery. This can help save your business money, increase productivity and save time by simply using a separate and dedicated voice back-up option.

Market your business nationally with local numbers

You can promote yourself wherever you are. Local numbers can be used outside of local areas to help open up new business opportunities.

Make it easier for customers to contact you

Number portability is simple and flexible with SIP Trunks, if you move premises you can keep the same business number. This helps your business to keep operating effectively, making business moves simpler.
